Knically Resigns

by Marc Yacker

JIM KNICELY RESIGNED last night, as President of the Student Council. Knically's action came late in a regularly scheduled Wednesday night meeting of the Council.

The resignation was the direct result of the Council's passage of a motion proposed by D.C. Commuter Representative Dave Phillips. The motion called for a "non-violent protest march" on Rice Hall to show student feeling about the administration's failure to move exams from Inauguration week. Phillips earlier had proposed a student protest strike, but that motion was defeated.

In speaking for the protest march, Phillips claimed that this was "the crux of student power." He called on Council members to "question their consciences."

Phillips called on Knically to take a position on the issue. Knically, however, although not refusing to enter debate, simply did not comment.

The motion was passed by a hand vote, by a substantial margin. Knically then called a brief recess, and it passed by word of mouth that if the motion was not reconsidered and defeated, Knically would resign.

Following the recess, Joel Alpert, proxy, moved to reconsider the question. In debate, Phillips pointed out that "if we strike this motion down, we laugh at ourselves. There is no reason to reconsider."

Treasurer Brian O'Neill also spoke against reconsideration. He castigated Council members for "voting one way, then five minutes later changing it all."

A motion to reconsider requires a two-thirds majority. The vote, again by hand count, was far from reaching that figure.

At this point Knically spoke. He said, "I am opposed to this motion; it's ridiculous and borders on the absurd. I will not compromise my issues. I've been disagreeing with the Council's votes for a long time. As titular head I cannot stay in good conscience. I will not lead a non-violent march on this issue. These things have their place. I'm announcing my resignation."

Elliott Turns Down Request To Resign As Club Member

by B. D. Cole

PRESIDENT LLOYD ELLIOTT has rejected requests by three campus leaders, and a demand by one, that he give up his membership in two private clubs, or give up his position of University President.

Nick Greer, acting Chairman of SDS, Council President Jim Knically, and SERVE President Dave Fishback, all "requested" that Elliott resign from the Burning Tree Golf Club and the University Club of Washington.

The University pays for Elliott's Burning Tree membership.

Wally Sherwood, President of The Black Student's Union, demanded the resignations, and did not sign the Knically, Fishback, Greer letter.

The four requested the resignations because they feel that the two clubs, neither of which has, or has ever had, Negro members, are "racist."

Hubert A. Schneider, President of the Burning Tree Golf Club, said that the student charges were "false, ridiculous, and blatantly untrue."

Schneider said that the club, to which Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy belonged, has never had a Negro member, "but no Negro was ever turned down for membership because none was ever proposed."

Burning Tree, according to Schneider, has had "Jews, Japanese, Chinese, and Bolivians. We only discriminate against females," Schneider said laughing. Burning Tree has only male members.

President Elliott said that he "honestly believes" that Burning Tree does not discriminate. He said that he accepted his membership in the club, which is paid for by the University, "on the advice of several members of the Board of Trustees."

The University Club of

Washington, of which Elliott is an honorary member along with 11 other college and university presidents, also claims to have no racial policy.

Adel Lovelace, secretary to the club's admissions board, said that the club has no racial policy, but that "membership is strictly by invitation."

According to Miss Lovelace, a proposed membership can be killed if as few as two of the club's 2500 members object to the person's being made a member.

Neither of the clubs has been involved in any public fight over (See ELLIOTT, p.3)

Pvt. Gallagher Fired As Cop

DORSEY A. GALLAGHER, former Campus Police officer, has been transferred to the GW maintenance department by Building Services Director Dermott Baird. It is believed that Gallagher's dismissal from the force was brought about for several reasons, including physical ones.

Gallagher was demoted to private last month for calling D.C. police after finding an unconscious male in Thurston Hall. He stated that he should have been allowed one mistake because of his long record on the force.

"When you've been on one job for 14 years and do a good job and then all of a sudden have to switch, it's hard," Gallagher said. He was forced to take a cut in pay, but wanted to stay with the University because, he said, "At my age I can't get a job just anywhere."

Federal Gun Law

Former GW Cop Arrested

by Bill Yard

LARRY W. MULL, 23, former member of the GW campus police, was arrested Friday, December 27, when he attempted to sell allegedly stolen firearms to a First District undercover agent.

Some of the ten rifles stolen from GW's Corcoran Hall rifle range over the Thanksgiving Holiday reportedly have been recovered in connection with Mull's arrest.

Charged with dealing in firearms without a license, Mull was arrested along with 19-year-old Glenn W. Merson in what could result in the first convictions under a new Federal gun law effective since Dec. 16.

The arrests were made in the rear of an office building used by the city's Vocational Rehabilitation Department at 1331 H St. First District privates W. R. Albert and R.B. Whaley set up the arrests, after Albert had made contact with the suspects and had arranged to purchase several rifles and handguns at a bargain price.

FBI agents and First District detectives watched the men arrive at the office building, where the sale was to have taken place. After Albert and Whaley locked the building's rear door with the suspects inside, the FBI agents and detectives entered the building by the front door to assist with the arrest.

Confiscated at this particular delivery were fifteen .45 caliber automatics valued at $30 apiece, and thirteen gas masks worth $4 each. The previous week, Albert had received six rifles from the pair as part of his undercover work.

Court of General Sessions Judge James A. Belson held preliminary hearings Tuesday.

Mull had been released on his personal bond, while bond for Merson was set at $5000.

Conviction under the new law carries penalty of up to five years imprisonment, or up to $5000 fine, or both.

When questioned about Mull's activities and character while on the campus police force, Captain Ari Kovacovich refused to comment, stating that anything he might say "may influence the course of justice." Mull was removed from the force Dec. 16, the day the firearms act became law, and ten days prior to his arrest.

Phillips, Clark Open Sociology Conference

by Rick Mink
Features Editor

REVEREND CHANNING E. Phillips and retired Associate Justice of the US Supreme Court Tom Clark will deliver the opening addresses at the Conference on American Social Problems, being held this Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Union Methodist Church and Lisner Auditorium.

The conference, titled "To Seek a Newer World," is being sponsored by the American Social Problems class of the Sociology Department.

Besides Phillips and Clark, other people scheduled to participate include former Kennedy assistant and former U.S. Congressman Brooks Hays, Adrian Dove, Bill Powers, Suffrage Bishop Paul Moore, sportscaster Maury Povich, Hal Walker of CBS, Bob Maynard from The Washington Post, Judge John Fauntleroy, and Judge Orm Ketchum.

In addition, several people are tentatively expected to participate. These include Mrs. Fred Harris (Senator Harris from Oklahoma--his wife); Rhody A. McCoy, an administrator from the Ocean Hill-Brownsville School district of New York; and Julius Hobson, recently elected member of the D.C. Board of Education.

Michael Miller, a student in the class and an organizer of the conference, said the idea for the conclave originated late in November and has just recently been finalized.

"We called people and wrote letters and we got responses. Mrs. Mona Scott (the Instructor) has done a lot of welfare and social type work, and she's made a lot of contacts. She's really in charge of the program."

"Any one in the class that wanted to participate in planning could have," Miller continued. "We just felt we had a good thing going in class and we wanted to share it."

Thursday's address will begin at 8 p.m. at Union Methodist Church, 814 20th St. Friday's activities will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. also at the church, and Saturday's seven panels will be held in Lisner Auditorium from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

New Education Loan Available for Students

WASHINGTON (CPS) - New legislation which makes it possible for a student to borrow money for educational expenses from his school - regardless of his state of residence - has gone into operation, under the Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

The new type of loan is authorized by recent amendments to Congress' Higher Education Act of 1965.

In most states, before the amendments were enacted, loans to non-resident students could not be insured. The amendments permit the Federal Government to insure loans made by a college to a student who, by reason of his residence, does not have access to a state or private loan insurance program.

The amendments also open the way for such organizations as commercial lending companies, insurance companies and pension funds to make federally insured loans to students. Many of these organizations had been willing to loan to students but had not been able to guarantee the loans.

Students may borrow up to $1500 a year to a maximum of $7500, including loans made for graduate study. Repayment begins after the student has left school, and may be extended over a period of from five to ten years, with deferment while serving in the military, Peace Corps or VISTA, or during periods of return to full-time study.

The federal government pays all interest charges (seven per cent a year) on behalf of a student whose adjusted family income is less than $15,000 a year, until repayment begins.

Since the inception of the student loan program, more than $1 billion has been loaned to students.

Final Exams To Be Held As Planned

FINAL EXAMS will be held as scheduled, from January 17 to January 25, the administration announced Wednesday. There will be no attempt to make up the week of classes that were cancelled by the flu.

The decision was made by a special committee appointed by President Elliott before Christmas. Assistant Vice-President H.J. Cantini, a member of the committee, explained that Dr. Reuben Wood, the faculty representative to the committee, had reported that the faculty on a whole opposed any rescheduling.

Cantini also said that the risk of a disturbance at the time of the inauguration seemed less than in December, observing that national SDS has stated that it does not plan any activities to compete with the inauguration.

Cantini said that the main reason for not rescheduling exams is that there were no good arguments made for a change.

At 1:00 pm today, members of the Burning Bush Country Club will be on hand. They will demonstrate how much fun it can be playing golf without worrying about minority groups infiltrating the plush greens and fairways of their club. Tee off time is 1:00 pm in front of the Student Union. Drinks will of course be served on the 9th hole. Be on hand. G.W. Guerrilla Theatre

Early GW Vacation Causes Slater Employee Lay Off

by Greg Valliere

THE FLU-INDUCED early vacation provided comfort and joy for most GW students, but for Slater employees the closing brought little happiness.

A number of ARA employees, who work on an hourly basis were laid off on Monday, Dec. 16. Slater District Manager Donald Jacobs defended the action, calling the flu epidemic an "act of God."

As the number of students on campus diminished, Jacobs began laying employees off because of a lack of work. The move, Jacobs explained, would provide Slaters with additional money to be used during final examinations on "an expanded lunch bag program."

Strong objections came from Student Facilities Director Robert Johnson and Student Life Committee member Dave Fishback, who said that it would not be proper for additional services to come "out of the hides of the employees."

Jacobs explained that several of the employees were originally scheduled to work only on Monday and Tuesday because of the expected exodus of students. Many of those laid off, Jacobs reasoned, were only losing two days of work.

ARA Slater would not make a profit on the lay-off, Jacobs stressed, because of a clause in their contract with the University which puts a limit on the amount of profit the company is allowed to make.

Johnson and Fishback argued that the students on the meal plan would rather continue with meals as usual than be given "extras" as a result of a Slater profit increase. They contended that the students would not wish to derive benefits resulting from "the non-payment of employees who, through no fault of their own, had lost hours of work."

Jacobs replied that employees could not be paid for time not worked. When asked if it would be within the scope of the contract to give bonuses concomitant with the hours lost, Jacobs said that it would.

When asked to make a payment in that manner, Jacobs hesitated, requesting to first receive some kind of recommendation from the Joint Food Service Committee, of which Johnson is chairman. Jacobs implied that he would accept the recommendation.

membership procedures or discrimination problems in the past.

In their letter to President Elliott, Greer, Fishback and Knicey asked Elliott with what authority he could hope to enforce the Human Relations Act as long as he is a member of "at least two discriminatory organizations."

In his reply to the four students, Elliott said that "neither the cause of equality nor the best interests of the University would be served at this time" by his resigning from the clubs.

Elliott told the Hatchet yesterday morning that he felt that "the easiest thing (he) could have done would have been to send in those letters, but to a considerable degree this would avoid the necessity to work for equal rights in a number of areas, including housing and jobs."

Elliott said that he wants to resist "being driven to either of the (racial) extremes."

"I hope I am a decent person," he said, "and I think someone must be around to bring the extremes together."

Elliott said that he does realize that there are inconsistencies in his belonging to the University Club at the same time he is responsible for the enforcement of the Human Relations Act, but he felt that he can take the spirit of the University community into the larger community outside the University.

Commenting on Elliott's refusal to resign from the clubs, Dave Fishback said that he felt that President Elliott has made a poor decision, and that if he isn't going to resign from the clubs, something "has to be done by this summer" to change them.

Wally Sherwood, who had "demanded" the resignations, said that he is "fed up." Commenting on the fact that Elliott's reply will cause a radical moderate split within the Black Students Union, Sherwood said that the reply will "strengthen the position of the radicals within the group." "I think," said Sherwood, "that maybe they (the radicals) should work on the administration for a while."

Mitchell Hall's New Pump Out-Pressures Old Pipes

AN OCCASIONAL flood, an absence of hot water, and a periodic lack of heat made Mitchell Hall one of the least desirable places on campus during the Christmas recess.

A new pumping system which was recently installed in the dormitory basement was blamed for most of the trouble. Mitchell's ancient pipes were unable to stand the higher pressure, and cracked in places during the vacation.

The most serious damage was done in room 325. The resident, Richard Axelrod, a freshman, returned to find his furniture missing and a gaping hole in his wall.

The broken pipe filled his room with water, rising to nearly an inch in some places. Gushing water ruined several objects in Axelrod's room. His blankets and spread were stained, and his alarm clock is not working. In addition, his television antenna was broken, possibly, he believes, during the removal of his furniture.

Axelrod indicated that he would attempt to be reimbursed for the damaged objects. "I'll try to get some money if it turns out that several objects need to be replaced," he said.

"They hope to have a new pipe in here soon and I've been told that the wall will be plastered up by the end of the week," he continued. Axelrod added that it was "quite a shock" to see the condition of his room when he returned. His furniture, now dry, has been re-installed.

Several other rooms received less serious flooding damage, and water reportedly seeped into the halls in some areas. The situation necessitated the loss of hot water for several days, upsetting many students who spent their vacation in the dorm.

"I don't particularly relish the idea of going to the gym every day to take a shower," one complained. Another resident dryly commented that the absence of hot water "took all the fun out of shaving." Hot water was available by Sunday although it has been sporadically shut off this week.

Resident Director Mike Holloran explained that no one could be blamed for the water problem. The old pipes simply could not cope with the new pump, he said. Commenting on complaints that the heat was not always on in the dorm, Holloran said that there wasn't any University policy to freeze residents during vacations, but admitted that it did go off occasionally.

JOHN CASSAVETES' FACES

"The film was included on the program of a film festival organized under the auspices of the Tennessee Arts Commission. A strangely heterogeneous audience—high school and college kids, housewives, businessmen, secretaries, academic types, and a smattering of beards and love beads—had endured two exhausting days of seminars, panel discussions and screenings by the time FACES was to be shown.

FACES—and I say this calmly as I can—is a beautiful film. It is a unique film. I have never responded, I have never seen an audience respond as we did that night. The faces that we saw were our own.

The film is the acting, and the players in FACES, all of them—John Marley, Gena Rowlands, Lynn Carlin, Seymour Cassel, and the others—simply gave, were allowed to give, the performance of their lives."

Inside

ONE DOESN'T HAVE TO BE of any particular political persuasion to observe that society today is becoming dangerously polarized.

A basic cause of this phenomenon is the idea of "dropping out,"—that is, if an organization doesn't follow the policies an individual prefers, that he should quit.

This is the easy way out. This is a means of saying, "I'm helpless, I can't make an effort toward constructive change."

It takes a bit more courage to stay and fight, without publicity, and often without immediate success. This is the price of the man who seeks reform.

President Elliott finds himself in this dilemma. Four students have demanded his resignation from two organizations—Burning Tree Country Club and the University Club. The easiest thing for him to do would be to resign. This he has refused to do. Although he has not publicly stated his intention to work within these organizations for change, it seems obvious, when one considers his repeatedly outspoken stands against discrimination, that this is what he has in mind. Tactically, it would be inadvisable for him to openly state his intent to work within, for he would do little more than damage any opportunities for success.

Certainly, Messrs. Wally Sherwood, David Fishback, and Nick Greer, who with Jim Knicely wrote to Elliott, are aware of the revolutionary tactic of working within, made famous by the Comintern's United Fronts. If they can contain their zeal for just a few months, they may see constructive action.

Outside

JIM KNICELY HAS RESIGNED as Student Council President.

It was an unfortunate and rash act. Knicely found that the Council did not agree with him, as they have not agreed on many occasions. Although there has previously been talk of his taking such a drastic step, it has never materialized.

Obviously, Knicely chose a difficult year to lead the Council. It has been a year of demonstrations and polarization. Although we have not always agreed with his policies, he at least made an effort to guide the Council with what he considered a common sense approach. Now, by resigning, he has violated the trust which an overwhelming number of students placed in him last February. He has done exactly what he often spoke of so harshly—the tendency of many radical students to disassociate themselves from Council and other organizations which seek change by working within the system. Dropping out, as Knicely often stressed, is a solution to nothing.

Now the burden of responsibility falls on Miss Ronda Billig. Hopefully, she will face her duties with a cool sense of reason and proportion. There is still a possibility of more demonstrations on campus before her term expires and a new president is elected. If she follows wisdom instead of whim, trouble may be averted.

Schlagel Answers

I would appreciate it if the Hatchet would publish the following more accurate account of my comments made during the Day of Dialogue as reported in the Dec. 16 issue under the title, "Prof. Says Black Culture Irrelevant to GW." While the rapid exchange of views in a somewhat emotional atmosphere must have made accurate reporting difficult, I do feel the account is a bit biased. As you will see, I do not intend to retract or whitewash anything I said, but would like to have my views understood as I presented them, though I suspect the same people will find them just as offensive.

First, I do not recall having said that "Black Culture is irrelevant to GW." But even if I had said this, the statement does not convey the essential meaning of my comments. When a student asked what had become of the proposal to offer a course in Negro history, I replied that such a course will be offered in Columbian College during the spring semester, and that the delay was due to the attempt to find an outstanding person to teach the course. When the questioner persisted by asking why more courses were not being offered, I gave the answer that incensed the students; namely, that black culture as such did not, in my opinion warrant an extensive course coverage. I still believe this judgment to be true and I stand by it. I did not admit, as reported by the Hatchet, "that I knew nothing about black culture" (though this is probably true). Rather, the students asserted that I knew nothing about black culture as their explanation as to how I could have made this judgment. But I submit that there are no black equivalents to Plato, Descartes, Kant, Dewey, Russell, etc. (I did mention at the time that St. Augustine was the only black philosopher that I knew of, but he certainly was a product of white culture), not to Dante, Shakespeare, Cervantes, Goethe, Baudelaire, etc., nor to Beethoven, Debussy, Wagner, Verdi, Shostakovich, etc., nor to Rembrandt, Michelangelo, Leonardo, Rodin, Cezanne, etc., nor to Galileo, Newton, Maxwell, Einstein, Bohr, etc. The fact that there are no equivalents is the reason why there is not greater emphasis on the part of whites to suppress Negro culture (as was claimed). I did say that if there were contemporary black writers, scientists, or artists of sufficient stature they should be incorporated into the appropriate existing courses. But again it can be asked whether there is a black Picasso, Menotti, Heisenberg, or Satre? There may well be in the near future, and I sincerely hope so. But until there is, black culture must be evaluated objectively. I have always strongly upheld Negro rights on the grounds of morality and justice, but I am not going to be emotionally coerced (however much sympathy I may have for the past injustices to Negroes) into attributing some mythical status to Negro culture. Nor am I impressed by Yale's new program in Afro-American studies. Anthropologists have been offering courses in primitive cultures for some time, but that does not change the status of those cultures. And if Harvard offered 20 courses in the history and culture of the American Indian, that would not change in any way the relative significance of American Indian culture.

Secondly, I did not say, as reported in the Hatchet that neither the faculty nor GW had any responsibility to the students—obviously such an opinion would be absurd. However, I did maintain, as reported by the Hatchet, that student participation in faculty meetings would be an infringement of faculty responsibility, and I did assert that when arriving at decisions the faculty was responsible to itself. This does not imply, however, that the faculty in many of its activities has no responsibility to students (or to the administration). But I do think it is a gross presumption on the part of students to maintain that the faculty is responsible to them. Are parents to their children? While the analogy is not entirely apt, it does imply that, because of certain qualifications various responsibilities fall to certain individuals and not to others.

Thirdly, I did not say that "to make faculty responsible to students would reduce them to 'hired laborers'." It was student McClenon who asserted that by virtue of paying his tuition, he was buying the services of the faculty, just as he would that of a lawyer (this was his example). It was in this context that I replied that this conception reduces the faculty to "hired laborers," and that I found this view to be "reprehensible." When I was a tuition paying student I then believed that it was a privilege to attend college and the university and I still hold to that opinion (though I do see that the assumption that everyone has a right to "higher education" does conflict with the notion that a higher education is a privilege to be earned and justified).

Finally, I did oppose the view that students are "equal" to the faculty. The relation of student-professor is not one of equality. I also objected to the assertion that students are scholars. Students are students and no verbal magic will change that fact. Moreover, students are (as they are fond of emphasizing) mainly under 21, with all the limitations as to maturity, experience, and intellectual development which this implies. I can appreciate their earnest, idealistic attempts to rectify many social injustices, but this does not compel me to acquiesce in those opinions or attitudes which I consider to be wrong. Too often the more radical student conveys the impression that his view is the only correct one.

Ashanti Incredible

The interview with racist J. Timothy Ashanti was rather incredible. If the Black Left is typified by a clown like Ashanti, it seems they are so far left that they lie to starboard of Lincoln Rockwell. My first reaction is to laugh him off as harmless. But then there was that insignificant clown named Adolf, who repeated his inanities so often in the face of laughter that the sheep began to believe him.

Plea for Agora

As the manager of the Pit, a performer, and a folk music enthusiast, I address this letter to the entire student and faculty body. I am disheartened at the current state of affairs at my competitor's coffeehouse, The Agora. Once the only bastion of folk music on campus, it has become, despite the growing undercurrent of the folk music movement in the D. C. area, nothing more than an underground beer hall where a performer must offer himself up as a human sacrifice to the boisterous, beer-drinking crowd.

I make this plea to the student body. My own coffeehouse is overflowing with performers playing to capacity crowds. The Agora, as a coffeehouse, may fail without your help. I ask, therefore, that on January 11, 1969, this coming Saturday night, that all those people who are interested in folk music, including that wonderful group of people who have made the Pit a warm, friendly place for performers and audiences alike, flock en masse to the Agora, and give the performers your respect and applause. Neil Harbus and I will do our utmost to provide the finest performers in the area. Already, six of the Pit's best performers have agreed to perform.

With your help, we can demonstrate to those who have twisted the Agora's function away from folk music, that there is still room for two coffeehouses on campus.

Mr. & Mrs. Human, But Stupid, America

by Brian Cabell

NOW THAT REVOLUTION is out of season here, it is perhaps time to critically analyze it and its implications.

Needless to say, the revolution of which SDS and other militant left wing groups speak is strongly opposed by at least 180 million Americans who, in fact, will fight to repel any such insurgency. This was clearly shown in Chicago.

Furthermore, despite the rhetoric about "polarization, alienation, and confrontation," virtually none of the young revolutionaries truly advocates violent revolution, storming the White House, guillotining Johnson and Ladybird. Virtually all abhor violence.

Nevertheless, we still hear of Che, Mao, and Malcolm.

There are two primary problems in America today which can be alleviated somewhat through direct action. They are racism and Vietnam. Racism is something which white students, almost by definition, should have no active part in unless called upon by blacks.

Which leaves Vietnam—and no one logically can deny that the primary cause of all student unrest on campus today is Vietnam. The correlation between the war and its escalation and the birth and growth of the Movement is very real and direct. Vietnam has in fact bred the movement.

Therefore any pressure applied directly against our despicable involvement in Vietnam or against racism of any sort is well-taken, reasonable, and emotionally satisfying. But the philosophical mumblings about restructuring a dehumanized society are absurd.

When one is speaking about a dehumanized society, one is speaking about almost 200 million people—save only the enlightened intellectuals. And one cannot change, even by violent, televised confrontation what has been instilled into the minds of people for so many years.

Whether we like it or not, Spiro Agnew represents the suburban mentality of today and George Wallace, the urban white and southern mentality.

These men and their followers are not evil. Perhaps ignorant, misled, reactionary, stupid or afraid, but not evil. Even Chicago's police were not evil—they were merely the physical manifestation of this mentality.

The young radical is thus placed in a quandry: How can I deal with these ignoramuses? Don't they realize that they are living a sterile, meaningless existence? Why don't they do something?

The wild-eyed, fiery-tongued university radical comes to regard Mr. and Mrs. America as dumb objects of the system, in a somewhat Marxian sense. Dumb, stupid, stubborn robots.

They are, in fact, human beings. Just like us. They have as much humanness, compassion, warmth as we. Perhaps less "intelligence" but perhaps more wisdom. They are individuals. There are 200 million me's in this country.

Look closely into everyone's eyes. Just like mine. A warm, thinking, troubled human being. Despite my enlightened blabbings about Vietnam and racism, I am no better than they.

They are human beings trying to live.

Maybe they and this system are still intolerable. If so, the world is very, very large and interesting; there is nothing sacred about the Appalachians and the Rockies.

Wolf's Whistle

'It's the Putting Greens'

Dick Wolfsie

IT HAS RECENTLY COME to the attention of this publication that Dr. Lloyd Elliott, President of GW, is a member of various country clubs which discriminate on the basis of race, religion, creed, and national handicap. In order to protect his image, Dr. Elliott decided recently to prove that such discrimination could not possibly exist. Rather than jeopardize his membership at his favorite country club, Turning Tree Country Club (which will take no Jews), he went down the street to Burning Bush Country Club, an organization with quite a different philosophy. He drove up in his black limousine and asked for the manager.

"Yes Sir, can I help you?"

"Yes, my name is Elliott, and I'd like to join Burning Bush Country Club."

"Well we'd be glad to have you Elliott. Now, tell me, what is your last name."

"That is my last name."

"I'm terribly sorry, you see Mr. Elliott, we're all filled up just now."

"It's not Mr. Elliott, it's Dr. Elliott."

"Oh, a doctor, huh. Maybe we could sneak you in anyway, but that last name has got to go."

"I'm not that kind of a doctor, I'm the President of George Washington University."

"George Washington Universal? Don't think I've ever heard of it. Is it on the big board, or the American Exchange?"

"Now lets get something straight. My name is Lloyd Elliott. I'm not a doctor of medicine, I'm not the president of a corporation, I'm the President of the George Washington University."

"Listen pal, I don't care if you're financial director of Yeshiva University, with a name like Elliott you can't join this club."

"Look, I'm a very important man at a very large University. I have a big, plush office, with three secretaries, on the eighth floor."

"Say, now you're talking like the gang. What's the name of your office building?"

"Luther Rice Hall."

"Oh. Are you sure you wouldn't want to tend bar? Look friend, I understand the problem, but why don't you just go down the block to Turning Tree Country Club, they'd love to have you."

"I'm afraid you don't understand the point of why I'm here."

"Oh, I get it. The reason you won't go to Burning Tree is the principle, the sense of values, the moral question, the image of a University: president, the power of the press, the ethical question."

"No, it's the putting Greens."

San Francisco Reopened

SAN FRANCISCO (CPS) — San Francisco re-opened Jan. 6 no closer to a solution of its problems or an end to violence than when it closed early for Christmas vacation three weeks ago.

Student strike leaders say they will continue militant action until their demands are met. They are expecting strong support from local non-white residents who have been urged by the new Community Strike Support Coalition to go to the campus "to see for themselves what is going on and support the effort for a just and equitable resolution of the strike."

The college also faces a faculty strike. The American Federation of Teachers, which includes about 150 of the school's 1100 faculty members, began a strike Jan. 6. Gary Hawkins, the union's local president, said his group would be joined by 320 members of the American Society of State (See SAN FRANCISCO, p. 8)

'United We Stand, Divided We Melt'

by Rick Mink

IN THE PAST THREE INTERVIEWS, we have looked at a variety of shades of the student left at GW. We have heard from an official member and leader of GW SDS, a vocal member of BSU, and a currently unaffiliated radical, and each of them had a different perspective on almost all the problems they examined or attacked.

To look at them individually, Chris Folkemer spoke of the ideal for the University (the community of scholars), supported Plato's stand on medicine, and identified the University with the society. So, many of his attacks on the University were actually attacks on society. The University was another cog in the machine of the corporate capitalist system. The University had become, primarily, a place at which the tinier cogs of the machine were manufactured. So according to Folkemer, the University had become a factory and the transformation was symptomatic of the major problem of today's society—that is, dehumanization at the hands of the corporate capitalistic tyrants.

However, what Folkemer suggested for the University was on the ideal plane. The specific, concrete details of how to achieve those ideals in a world that is undoubtedly mechanistic, dehumanistic, and materialistic, were lacking. That is not necessarily a fault. Before one can come up with plans, he must be committed to an ideal or his plans will lack conviction and real substance. But, the plans must eventually be made, and evidently, Folkemer has not reached that stage of development as of yet.

The first personal reaction I had to what J. Timothy Ashanti said was a combined one of fright (which was undoubtedly part of his aim—he succeeded) and sadness. The sadness comes, I think, from the realization that one person can contain so much hate and resentment and the further realization that the hate and resentment is very likely justified. It is difficult to admit to one's self that one's race has been guilty and is guilty of sustained injustice and cruelty to other human beings.

Once past the initial emotional reactions, however, one can draw some interesting conclusions. First, fear is a tactic to Ashanti, and one which he is well adept at using. Obviously, the tactic is immensely valuable, especially when one is dealing with people who are, for the most part, ignorant of black people. But another evident fact is that black people in general and black militants in specific have a leadership problem. The first thing that Ashanti mentioned was the disclaimer of his being a leader. "I'm a member of BSU and that's all," he said. He also said that there could be no black-white alliances until there was black unity. The fact is that until there is black unity, there can be nothing at all. Blacks, and particularly the militants, will face the same problems that the old Student Board of Trustees faced, namely that participatory democracies work with very small groups (probably no more than three or four). To be effective as a movement, the group must be large, and to effectively use a large group there must be strong leadership.

Wally Sherwood, who "the blacks on this campus elected as their leader" according to Ashanti, doesn't seem to fill the gap. Ashanti might, but he refuses to assume the role. That the leadership problem is reflective of the national scene is also significant. Since the murders of Malcolm X and, to a lesser extent (for the militants), Dr. King, the blacks are hurting for a leader. Eldridge Cleaver might have filled the vacancy also, but the government of California seemed determined to keep him from doing so. Their apparent solution is one of small guerilla bands, but even these must be led.

The other most apparent fact about Ashanti as an individual and perhaps the entire black movement, is that he is really not interested in the improvement of the University as an institution. When a black militant has to make a demand of 150 new black students, which can become as token and meaningless a gesture as anything else, then the University is not their first concern.

Ashanti does not, as Folkemer seems to, see the University as capable of becoming a relevant and ideal institution which could be instrumental in evaluating, criticizing and improving society. Ashanti seems to see the University as a place where the black man can learn to outwit the white man on his own territory, and at the same time help him to develop his black consciousness.

Bruce Smith is a puzzle. Most of the time he talks moderately about problems and solutions. He is even specific. He talks about changes in curriculum and replacement of certain administrators for certain reasons. In fact, most of the time he seems just a bit too rational, a bit too specific, a bit too comprehensible, to be a radical. Perhaps, this is due to the disenchantment with local radicals that exists both inside and outside the radical ranks. Perhaps, he has mellowed with the constant membership on committees and consultation with officials—student faculty, and administration. Perhaps (and most likely), he has realized that to appear mellowed is the best way to get things accomplished at GW. However, that is walking a very thin tightrope indeed. If that is in fact what Smith is doing, it will be interesting to see how he manages it.

As to what Smith says about the University, it does make sense. The idea for American Thought & Civilization type seminars for freshmen is, I think, a tremendous idea. To point out contradictions and expose lies, particularly in the administration (a plan which he shares, incidentally, with Ashanti), is a necessary tactic, especially at a University where free-floating apathy could easily overlook the lies and contradictions. "Keep them honest" has, unfortunately, too much significance here.

Some militaristic forefather once said, "United we stand, divided we fall." There are too many aspects of University change which take on the appearance of battles. If this is the case, then the left has to adopt itself to embrace some battle techniques. The blacks purport to have done this, but their focus is not the University. The University may not be the ultimate focus of white radicals, but it is the starting point, and the movement may not move any further than that point if it doesn't win some battles there. And the first maxim of battles is the old "United we stand" phrase, because divided, they will eventually just melt away.

Playtex invents the first-day tampon™

(We took the inside out to show you how different it is.)

Outside: it's softer and silky (not cardboardy).
Inside: it's so extra absorbent...it even protects on your first day. Your worst day!

In every lab test against the old cardboardy kind...
the Playtex tampon was always more absorbent.
Actually 45% more absorbent on the average than the leading regular tampon.

Because it's different. Actually adjusts to you.
It flowers out. Fluffs out. Designed to protect every inside inch of you. So the chance of a mishap is almost zero!
Try it fast.

Referendum to be Tuesday For New SC Constitution

THE CONSTITUTIONAL referendum has been rescheduled for Tuesday, January 14, Student Council Vice-President Ronda Billig said. The referendum had originally been scheduled for December 18, but was postponed when classes that week were cancelled.

Voting will be held in Woodhull House from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Miss Billig said. Results of the referendum will be posted in the Student Union Annex and on other University bulletin boards.

In addition to the question on adoption of the new constitution, there will be two questions on proposed amendments to be included at time of adoption. One of the proposals will restore the office of Foreign Student Representative, which was abolished by the Council.

The other question will allow students to vote for either of two proposals to restore some form of dormitory and commuter representation to the Council or to vote for accepting the at-large method of representation as approved by the Council. Miss Billig emphasized that only students voting for the new constitution may vote on the amendments.

An abbreviated version of the ballot is included below.

BALLOT

Student Council Referenda Ballot

Article for Referendum No. 1

I vote yes to accept the New Constitution of the Student Assembly.

I vote no to accept the new Constitution of the Student Assembly.

Only those who have voted yes may vote on Articles No. 2 and No. 3

Article for Referendum No. 2

Pending the ratification of the new Constitution,

[Interpretive Note: This will have the effect of adding a Foreign Student Representative to the Student Assembly.]

Article for Referendum No. 3

You may vote A or B or No. A. Pending the ratification of the new Constitution,

[Interpretive Note: This will have the effect of removing the seven at-large representatives and adding one Maryland-Virginia Commuter Representative, one District of Columbia Commuter Representative, one Women's Dormitory Representative, one Men's Dormitory Representative, and three at-large representatives.]

B. Pending the ratification of the new Constitution,

[Interpretive Note: This will have the effect of removing the seven at-large representatives and adding one representative from each residence hall except Thurston Hall which will have three representatives. It will also add one Maryland Commuter Representative, one Virginia Commuter Representative, and two District of Columbia Commuter Representatives.]

C. No
[Interpretive Note: This will have the effect of defeating provisions A and B of this question and maintaining the seven at-large representatives as provided in the new Constitution.]

College Professors, and predicted that 60 to 75 per cent of the faculty would respect the picket lines. Students and professors on several other state college campuses have been planning sympathy strikes.

Meanwhile, Acting President S.I. Hayakawa, who had police on the campus every day during the first two weeks of his tenure, has taken an even harder line toward demonstrations.

He said police will patrol classroom buildings, but none will be used outside unless his new restrictions are violated. Violations appear certain.

Writing Awards Offered

THE OFFICE of the Registrar announces two prizes open to students at GW, the Jesse Frederick Essary Prize in Journalism and the Alexander Wilbourne Weddell Prize. Interested students are asked to see the member of the faculty responsible for each prize at once. Winners will be announced at the Prize Awards Tea on June 6, 196. Jesse Frederick Essary Prize: An award established by Helen Essary Murphy and awarded annually to a student who has given promise of sound citizenship and who submits the best printed and published evidence of ability in "forthright reporting" and good journalistic writing, in a student publication or elsewhere. Candidates are asked to see Professor Robert C. Willson, Library 407, Journalism Department.

Alexander Wilbourne Weddell Prize: An award established by Virginia Chase Weddell in memory of her husband. Awarded annually to a candidate for a degree who writes the best essay on the subject of "the promotion of peace among the nations of the world." The University reserves the right to withhold the award if not essay attaining the required degree of excellence is submitted. Candidates are asked to see Professor Ralph E. Purcell, Rice Hall, 610.

Area Flu Rate Still High; GW Absentees Normal

NO SIGNIFICANT absenteeism has been reported this week on campus, but the District is still suffering from a record-breaking flu epidemic.

University medical officials expect no abnormal trouble from the flu in the near future, Health Services Director Dr. R. B. Castell reported yesterday. District officials, however, have recorded the highest one week total of pneumonia-influenza deaths in history.

"While the flu is still serious in town, the number of students coming in isn't nearly as much as the number before the vacation," Castell said. Because of finals, he explained, the health center is not expecting many students. "We sometimes see some students after vacation who did a little too much celebrating, but by the time finals roll around, most people get pretty serious," he continued.

The rate of flu cases seems to be dropping all over the nation, Castell noted, and he accordingly expects the light campus rate to "drop off rapidly."

District officials were not as optimistic, announcing Tuesday that last week's 31 known deaths attributed to the flu topped the previous one week high, set during a 1960 epidemic.

Local officials believe the epidemic has peaked here, however, but expect the number of deaths to remain abnormally high through next week. Area businesses have reported absentee rates of close to 15% at times, with some schools' rates double the average.

The disease has peaked throughout most of the nation, with about 1200 deaths recorded thus far.

Linton Rubberstamp

After all of Dean Linton's "rubber-stamping" of a liberal education he seems to have missed out on a bit of it himself.

His broad English background seems to have left him deficient in the area of Greek-derived words. A case in point is the prefix "dia," which the Greeks so neatly joined with the word

"logos." In English, the word is "dialogue," commonly defined as a "talking together" (Webster's New World Dictionary), not "beyond," "down to," or "apart from." My belief that the Dean had chosen the wrong word to characterize his approach to the students and the problems was confirmed when he deserted his discussion on Friday evening.

Was this Day of Dialogue but an empty illusion? Was this Day but a single oasis in an intellectual desert? How can any meaningful dialogue coexist with attitudes such as Professor Gray's (if you don't like the way GW is being run you can "get out"). How can any mutual trust and respect, which President Dixon of Antioch College stipulated as fundamental in student-faculty coexistence, be sustained in the light of Dean Linton's self-mutilating metaphors of "anti-rationalist dogs" by which he characterized some of our students? Such small-minded attitudes must necessarily plague the conscience of an academic community.

My personal feeling is that the Day of Dialogue was partially successful only because the Dean was not supported by his fellow faculty members. Just as Dr. Linton was insisting that students not have a considerable influence on decision-making processes, many troubled departments were setting up means to insure the contrary.

This Day thus functioned much like the vote of confidence currently used in England, Canada, and elsewhere. However, it functioned in reverse for the Dean as it often does for others. There is unmistakable evidence that surely the students, and not surprisingly the faculty do not support their Dean. Thus it is customary that a leader step down from his post when he has lost the vote of confidence because he no longer represents his constituency. Therefore, in order to maintain some vestige of self-respect, common decency, and concern for the university, it is incumbent upon Dean Linton to relinquish his position to someone who can adequately represent the faculty (and even the students) of the Columbian College.

Coberly a Disgrace

It's really a disgrace when a full professor in the department of English is unable to properly speak the language. This is the case with Dr. James Coberly. The man may have some intelligence, but one would not know it at times because he gargles, chews and digests his words. He should not be allowed to teach. But the fact that he does teach at GW sort of makes sense because it was here that he got his BA, MA and PhD. Very simply, the essence of English is communication and very bluntly, Coberly cannot communicate.

A Crane Shame

Professor Crane of the English Department has pulled a "cutie" on his English Drama (183) students. On Monday, Jan. 6, he assigned an 8-10 page paper due on Friday, Jan 17, also the day of his final examination. Supposedly, this paper was announced on the first day of class. If so, it was never again mentioned during the semester. A more inappropriate and ill-advised action could not have been taken at the present time.

Meanwhile, Professor Crane has not been in class for the last two periods. His students should not be asked to make up for his absence by additional work, at least not one and a half weeks before finals.

You Are More Than Ever Welcome...

Each month we issue an open invitation to area college students to drop by for Sunday evening supper, offering minimal, but wholesome, gastronomic inducement, while hoping for maximal intellectual stimulation on the part of our guests. We had no idea initially whether to expect five or fifty. In both cases, we were happily blessed with the latter.

As a result, our program continues on its merry, unstructured way. On Sunday evening, January 12, at 6 p.m., we'll be there with the spaghetti and chianti, waiting for you to join us and have it out with one another, whatever is on your minds-- no holds barred. Only one ground rule: please, please pick up the phone, call EM 2-1700, and give the willing cooks a fair chance.

You don't have to be told that it's an exciting world for college students today, whether perpetrated upon or by you. We're sure you have something to say about it. Please be our guests.

Engineers, Mathematicians: At NSA, our successes depend on yours.

Because of the nature and scope of the National Security Agency's mission, our successes are in direct relation to your achievements.

At NSA, we are responsible for designing and developing secure/invulnerable communications and EDP systems to transmit, receive and analyze much of our nation's most vital information. The advancing technologies applied in this work are such that they will frequently take you beyond the known and accepted boundaries of knowledge. Consequently, your imagination and resourcefulness are essential qualifications for success.

The Career Scene at NSA

ENGINEERS will find work which is performed nowhere else... devices and systems are constantly being developed which are in advance of any outside the Agency. As an Agency engineer, you will carry out research, design, development, testing and evaluation of sophisticated, large-scale cryptocommunications and EDP systems. You may also participate in related studies of electromagnetic propagation, upper atmosphere phenomena, and solid state devices using the latest equipment for advanced research within NSA's fully instrumented laboratories.

MATHEMATICIANS define, formulate and solve complex communications-related problems. Statistical mathematics, matrix algebra, and combinatorial analysis are but a few of the tools applied by Agency mathematicians. Opportunities for contributions in computer sciences and theoretical research are also offered.

Career Benefits

NSA's liberal graduate study program permits you to pursue two semesters of full-time graduate study at full salary. Nearly all academic costs are borne by NSA, whose proximity to seven universities is an additional asset.

Starting salaries, depending on education and experience, range from $8845.00 to $15,000.00, and increases will follow systematically as you assume additional responsibility. Further, you will enjoy the varied career benefits and other advantages of Federal employment without the necessity of Civil Service certification.

Check with your Placement Office for further information about NSA, or write to: Chief, College Relations Branch, National Security Agency, Ft. George G. Meade, Md. 20755, Att: M321. An equal opportunity employer, M&F.

Moron Becomes Genius In Sensitive, Moving Film

by Mark Olshaker

"Charly," at the Playhouse Theatre, is a sensitive, moving, well-made film which should have been better than it was. Starring Cliff Robertson and Claire Bloom, it concerns 37-year old Charly Gordon, a man with an I.Q. of 68, transformed by revolutionary surgery into an intellectual superman.

The film is based on Daniel Keyes' Hugo and Nebula Award-winning short story and novel, "Flowers for Algernon." Unfortunately, the movie from time to time breaks with Keyes' story and when it does, it usually suffers. But, the end product is still a memorable one.

Once you accept the admittedly far-fetched premise of tripling a man's mental capabilities through neurosurgery, you are left with a generally believable and always engrossing motion picture.

Prior to the operation, Charly works as a janitor in a bakery, where he is the butt of continual jokes by all of his "best friends." The only one who accepts him as a person is his teacher, Mrs. Kinian. Through Charly's pre-operation struggles we see that everyday occurrences to us, such as writing the word "school" correctly, are major victories to him. In a degree seldom matched outside the documentary film we are given insight into what it must be like to be retarded.

Although his despair is apparent, Charly's burning desire to succeed, his unending drive and "motivation" as he calls it, are not as well brought-out as they might have been. Also detracting from the film's quality was the split screen technique for facial confrontation. Despite the fact that we were able to see the faces of two people staring straight at each other, this piece of camera acrobatics was jarring and distracted from the dramatic moments of the scenes in which it was used.

Once the operation is performed, Charly slowly develops into a mental giant, capable of comprehending practically everything. But with this intelligence comes insight into why people were laughing at him before, and what it meant when people said, "to pull a Charly Gordon."

The mood may be summed up by Robertson's observation to Miss Bloom, "Why would people who would never dream of laughing at a blind or crippled man laugh at a moron?"

In spite of several faults or spots where the picture could have been made more poignant, "Charly" is a commendable film definitely worth seeing. The only word to describe Robertson's acting is excellent. Before the operation, he admirably portrays not only Charly's blank stare and garbled speech, but his impaired motor development as well. The transition from moron to genius is subtle and highly realistic. It is probably the best performance turned in thus far by this fine actor.

'Faces,' 'Romeo and Juliet'

P. Spencer Wachtel

"FACES" is a deceptive film, appearing at first as an improvisational inferno revealing the torments of a middle-aged marriage. But the percept of John Cassavetes' film changes when we realize that it is not an adult "Warrendale" but rather a carefully planned attempt to dramatize a grown-up world where soap opera happenings are realities.

"Faces" is a simple story of the now loveless marriage between Richard and Maria Forst, (played subtly and with polish by John Marley and Lynn Carlin) and the actions each takes after Richard announces he wants a divorce, is treated bravely and without flinching by Cassavetes. Maria picks up a hustler-hippie at a discotheque while her husband visits a whore with a heart of fool's gold. Seymour Cassel and Gena Rowlands are fine in these supporting roles and Mr. Cassel might even merit an Academy Award nomination. He participates in some touching scenes at Maria's home, particularly when one of her elder, uglier and heavier friends tries desperately to get a touch of affection from him.

"Faces," playing at the Capitol Hill Theatre, is interesting and worthwhile but it bogs down in overlong scenes and repetitious characters, due in part to its original concept as a stage play. It has something to say about modern marriage, but the message takes two hours while "Petulia" was able to say it in two lines.

Romeo and Juliet

DIRECTORIAL INTERPRETATIONS are funny things, but one of the finest decisions to have recently been made was Franco Zeffirelli's notion to cast "Romeo and Juliet" as barely post-pubic lovers. As one person commented, Zeffirelli sees the film as a tragic romance, rather than a romantic tragedy. The kids are in love, and to them everything is terribly serious and terribly important. The director respects their emotions and by using a vast wealth of technical virtuosity, strong supporting actors and intelligent revision of Shakespeare's text, he spurs the classic play to cinematic life.

The two stars, Leonard Whiting and Olivia Hussey are ingratiating and believable, and certain oversights (such as Juliet's figure dwarfing any thirteen-year-old's I've ever seen) can easily be excused. It is a personal film aided by tender performances.

Mercutio's "A plague on both your houses" is presented as the angry cry of a boy who has briefly glimpsed some of the inanities of the world before he dies. At first nobody believes he is dead. They cannot fully accept the notion of death, it is so alien. Likewise, all the numerous killings become meaningless and hollow, much more senseless than in "Bonnie and Clyde." It is a world of children playing at being adult but terrified when adult responsibilities befall them.

Milo O'Shea deserves special recognition in a superb performance as Friar Laurence. He accomplishes through his eyes and through slight movements the essence of the role — that of a mischievous, somewhat cantankerous, but absolutely good man.

What else is there to say? "Romeo and Juliet," at the Dupont Theatre, is a beautiful picture, and I was not furious that they excised my favorite speech — "And when he shall die take him and cut him in little stars." I was upset, but one tries not to be petty when faced with a professional, absorbing film.

Please, Don't See 'Candy'!

IF YOU'VE read Candy, by Terry Southern and Mason Hoffenberg, don't go to see the movie. If you haven't read the book, read it, and pass up the movie. Even if you haven't read the book, and don't intend to read it, pass up the movie.

As a novel, Candy is funny and sexy. As a movie, it is tasteless, close to humorless, and certainly not as sexually provocative as "A Man and A Woman," "Dear John," or even "The Three Stooges Meet Frankenstein."

Ewa Aulin, the angle-faced blond who plays Candy, is definitely a discovery. Candy, a sexually precocious high school girl who copulates her way around the world, is, according to the novel, an individual of limited intelligence, which explains her somewhat unusual sex life. It is hard to believe that anyone could project herself into a part as perfectly as Miss Aulin projects herself into the part of Candy, without having something in common with the character. Many big names clamored to play one of the men in Candy's bed. And each has a potentially very funny part.

Richard Burton, as a lecherous, drunken poet is extremely amusing, for about the first three minutes of his appearance.

Walter Matthau, as a "commie" hating paratroop commander who hasn't left his plane for six years, is the personification of the new left's picture of all military commanders. But his part also is too long and drawn out.

James Coburn, as a world famous brain surgeon who operates on Candy's father, takes some painfully pointed pokes at people who spend all their time discussing, reading about and looking at pictures of operations, but the satire is lost in one of the most tasteless, gory, disgusting scenes in any movie on either side of "Bonnie and Clyde."

But the writers are to be blamed for this abysmal failure. Buck Henry, who mangled the Southern-Hoffenberg novel, had some amusing material to work with. The problem is, quite simply, that he worked it to death. As a half hour short, Candy could have been wonderful. But Henry was unable to produce a feature length film which is both amusing and in good taste.

Candy does have one good feature, and that is its hard hitting, rock sound track written by Dave Gursin and performed by The Byrds and Steppenwolf.

Buff Finish 3rd in Buffalo; Lose TV Game to W. Va.

GW SUFFERED its first defeat of the season on December 17, losing to Maryland, 99-96, at College Park. Down by ten points with less than nine minutes to play, the Colonials rallied to close the gap to one in the closing minute.

The game was a bitter disappointment for Coach Wayne Dobb's squad, which had hoped to end years of frustration at Cole Field House. Underdog Maryland was led by Mickey Wiles, who scored 22 with eight assists. Will Hetzel, the Terps high scorer, was held to 14 points.

Bob Tallent led the Buff, as usual, with 35 points. The senior guard hit on 12 of 28 from the floor and 11 of 13 at the line. Mike Tallent and Bill Knorr were the only other Colonials to hit double figures, scoring 14 and 11, respectively. Knorr had 16 rebounds.

What Happened?

—Stu Sirkin

GW FANS(?), it is about time you stopped coming to games. After all the team lost four times over Christmas. You now no longer have an undefeated team to back. You will not be able to see GW listed in the top ten or even top twenty teams in the country. So stop coming to games.

When GW was 5-19 last year every win was a shock. This year they spoiled you with six wins in a row. They were lucky to get that far; they did it on hustle and the shooting of the Tallents. But no player can be hot every night, and when the Tallents shooting is off, the Colonials other weaknesses become obvious.

What is wrong with GW's basketball team? Nothing that was not wrong with them before Christmas. GW's offense is their backcourt and no team is going to win every game, Kentucky excluded (and even they had rebounding and scoring off front), with only the backcourt scoring.

Some day the guards will be cold and then you must have the rebounding. GW does not have a strong front line. They are good basketball players but are not big enough when playing a team with a strong, tall front line.

Bill Knorr at six foot seven is the key to the board game. When Knorr is in there, GW does fair on the boards, but when he gets into foul trouble, forget it. Roger Strong is a good ball player, but he is only six foot five. Strong, who has not played as well this year as last season when he was the team MVP, has defensive difficulties with taller players. But if Knorr takes the center, in most cases Roger will be giving inches away to the man he is covering.

To add to GW's difficulties, Harold Rhyne, the six foot three leaper, twisted an ankle against from their first loss of the season, the GW basketball team was upset by East Carolina, 88-83, in a game played December 21 at Greenville, N.C. Both squads shot well, with East Carolina hitting on an amazing 52 per cent of its shots. GW connected for a respectable 49 per cent. Leading all scorers in the game was Bob Tallent, who had 26 points. Brother Mike, who was hindered by the loss of one of his contact lenses, nevertheless came up with 16.

East Carolina was paced by a well-balanced attack, with five players hitting in double figures.

Queen City Classic

GW's basketball team was knocked off, 69-60, by Long Island University, but bounced back to defeat Canisius, 96-74, to capture third place in the Queen City Tourney, played on December 27-28 in Buffalo.

The Long Island game pitted the tourney's powerhouses, and the Buff fell to one of the best small college teams in the nation. Bob Tallent accounted for over half of the GW points, scoring 33. A poor shooting percentage—35—and a four day layoff hampered the Colonials.

In the consolation game, GW had an easy time with Canisius, which was defeated the previous night by Dartmouth. Mike and Bob had one of their greatest nights together, scoring 34 and 28 points respectively. Bill Knorr had 19 rebounds, Roger Strong 18 and Harold Rhyne 14.

Both Bob and Mike were named to the all-tourney team. Bob lost the MVP award by one point. L.I.U. won the tourney, demolishing Dartmouth in the finale.

West Virginia

GW's hope for national prominence was shattered last Saturday, as the Buff were routed by West Virginia, 100-81, in a regionally televised game.

Fans all along the east coast got a chance to see Bob Tallent, currently the nation's fifth leading scorer. Bob and his younger brother Mike were ice cold for most of the first half. Occasional hot streaks in the second half gave Bob 27 points and Mike 24. Nevertheless, their combined shooting total was 22 for 61.

More impressive was the unified attack displayed by the Mountaineers, who had all five starters in double figures. Led by Bob Hummel, who had 21 points, the West Virginia squad shot 48 per cent, compared to a dismal 35 per cent by GW.

The loss of Bill Knorr for most of the game because of foul problems, left the Buff weak under the boards, and as a result the Mountaineers were getting second and third tries. Carey Bailey had 15 rebounds and Larry Woods grabbed 13.

Wrestlers Preview Tonight Against Catholic Grapplers

VARSITY WRESTLING comes to the men's gym tonight at 8 p.m. as Catholic University visits the first-year GW grapplers. The match will be the first of the year for both clubs.

The Colonials were scheduled to have their first match before the vacation against American, but that match was another victim of the flu that closed both schools. The American match will be made up Monday night at American.

Coach Gene Kerin is optimistic about the Colonials' debut. Although worried about the condition of his wrestlers after the long vacation, he feels the team should be ready and eager for their first match.

Bob Grant will be at 123 pounds for the Buff with Jan Sicker at 130 pounds and Wayne Barbaro at 137. Captain Dave Greenberg will give the Colonials a solid wrestler at 145.

Don Pashayan comes in at 152, Steve Silverman at 160, and Ken Butler at 167. The upper weight classes are in the hands of some capable upperclassmen. At 180 pounds, ex-GW gridded Ed

BILL KNORR (50), Harold Rhyne (22), and Roger Strong (32) also hit the boards as GW beat Furman.

Tallent, Knorr Show Furman Cage Punch

by Stu Sirkin
Sports Editor

BILL KNORR was the main event, but Bob Tallent was the show as GW destroyed Furman, 92-74, Tuesday night at Ft. Myer. The anticipated duel between Tallent and Dick Esleeck, the second leading scorer in the Conference, never materialized; but Tallent was enough of a show himself.

Tallent scored 41 points in his best game of the season. He hit nine out of his first ten shots and had 16 of the Buff's first 18 points. He finished with a fantastic 19 of 28 field goals, ten assists, and eight rebounds.

The game was close, until Bill Knorr provided the spark, or more appropriately the punch, midway in the second half. With GW leading 53-46, Mike Tallent drove in, on a lay-up, put it in and was fouled, but Knorr going up for the expected rebound, fell into Steve Cockrum of Furman as he came down. Cockrum rewarded Knorr's momentum with an elbow in the face, and Knorr decked Cockrum with a short right to the jaw.

Both players were asked to leave as a flagrant foul was called on both squads. Mike Tallent made his foul shot, and Bob sank the two technicals; Steve McCammon of Furman sank only one foul shot and GW had jumped to an 11 point lead.

The Colonials never trailed as Mike Tallent threw in a lay-up before Bob took charge. Working a 1-3-1 zone against the Pirates, instead of their usual man-to-man, the Buff made Furman work for every shot. The Colonials led only 35-29 at halftime with Bob Tallent having 21 points on 10 of 14 field goal attempts.

GW and the Tallents both started slowly in the second half. With Bob not taking any shots, Furman moved to within one point, 41-40, with about 14 minutes to go. But then Roger Strong, who played his best game of the year, put in a lay-up on a big offensive rebound, Harold Rhyne sank two fouls, Knorr hit a jumper, and Bob Tallent threw in one of his long range bombs, to give the Colonials a 49-40 lead.

After the Knorr punch, the Tallent brothers got hot and that was the ball game. Mike finished with 19 points and Rhyne added 16. Steve McCammon led the losers with 20. The big difference in the teams was the shooting percentage. GW hit 55 per cent, while Furman hit 36 per cent.

Esleeck, incidentally, finished with 11 points and looked bad doing it. Tallent won the duel, the game, and finally gave GW fans the show for which they have been waiting. A show more than worthy of the fifth leading scorer in the nation.

Badminton This Saturday

THE ONLY intramural event that will be held this week is badminton. Competition will be on Saturday in the men's gym beginning at 10:30 a.m. Those who win on Saturday will be eligible for the championships on Sunday beginning at noon. Play Saturday is on a first-come basis.
